REFERENCE – APTIL 2017

Award winning performer Jack Jovicic is a Serbian-Australian actor, film maker and star of stage and screen. He is best known for his hard man roles – first as standover man and burglar in “Never too late” (2013); Eastern Mob hitman ‘Alexei Machina’ in ‘Lake of Fire’ (2014); ex biker ‘Shotty’ in ‘The Brotherhood’ (2015) and as a ruthless drug dealing trucker in “Three Swords” (2015) – but you would be mistaken if you saw Jack as nothing but a flint eyed heavy. In more recent outings he has turned his acting skills to dramatic roles; He played tormented father and woodsman Dan in supernatural drama ‘The Voice in the Wilderness (2016) as well as starring in the lead role of conflicted ex drug lord and Serbian Orthodox Priest ‘Jovan’ in micro feature ‘Hidden Light’ (2017).

Jack is a natural story teller with a great sense of comedic timing. This came to the fore in comedy thriller ‘The Artifact’ (2015). He has also performed standup comedy in venues across Australia and delights audiences with his energetic delivery, timing and empathy.

On screen Jack’s presence and animated facial expressions are compelling. He moves fluidly and has a natural sense of where the camera is at any given point in a scene. Jack is also a solid physical performer, able to tackle a range of tasks without stand-ins and is always willing to ‘have a go’ if asked. A shrewd judge of material, Jack’s insight in to character is highly valued by production teams and he can be relied upon to occupy any role he takes and make it his own.

Jack is a gifted mimic and is able to voice a wide variety of accents including (but not limited to) Eastern European, US American, Canadian, several English dialects and Scots/Irish. Jack’s deep baritone has an earnest timbre which adds gravitas to Voice Over work.

Hardworking, dedicated, talented and charismatic, Jack Jovicic is an asset to any production.
